

Welcome to the Richard Meroving Universe

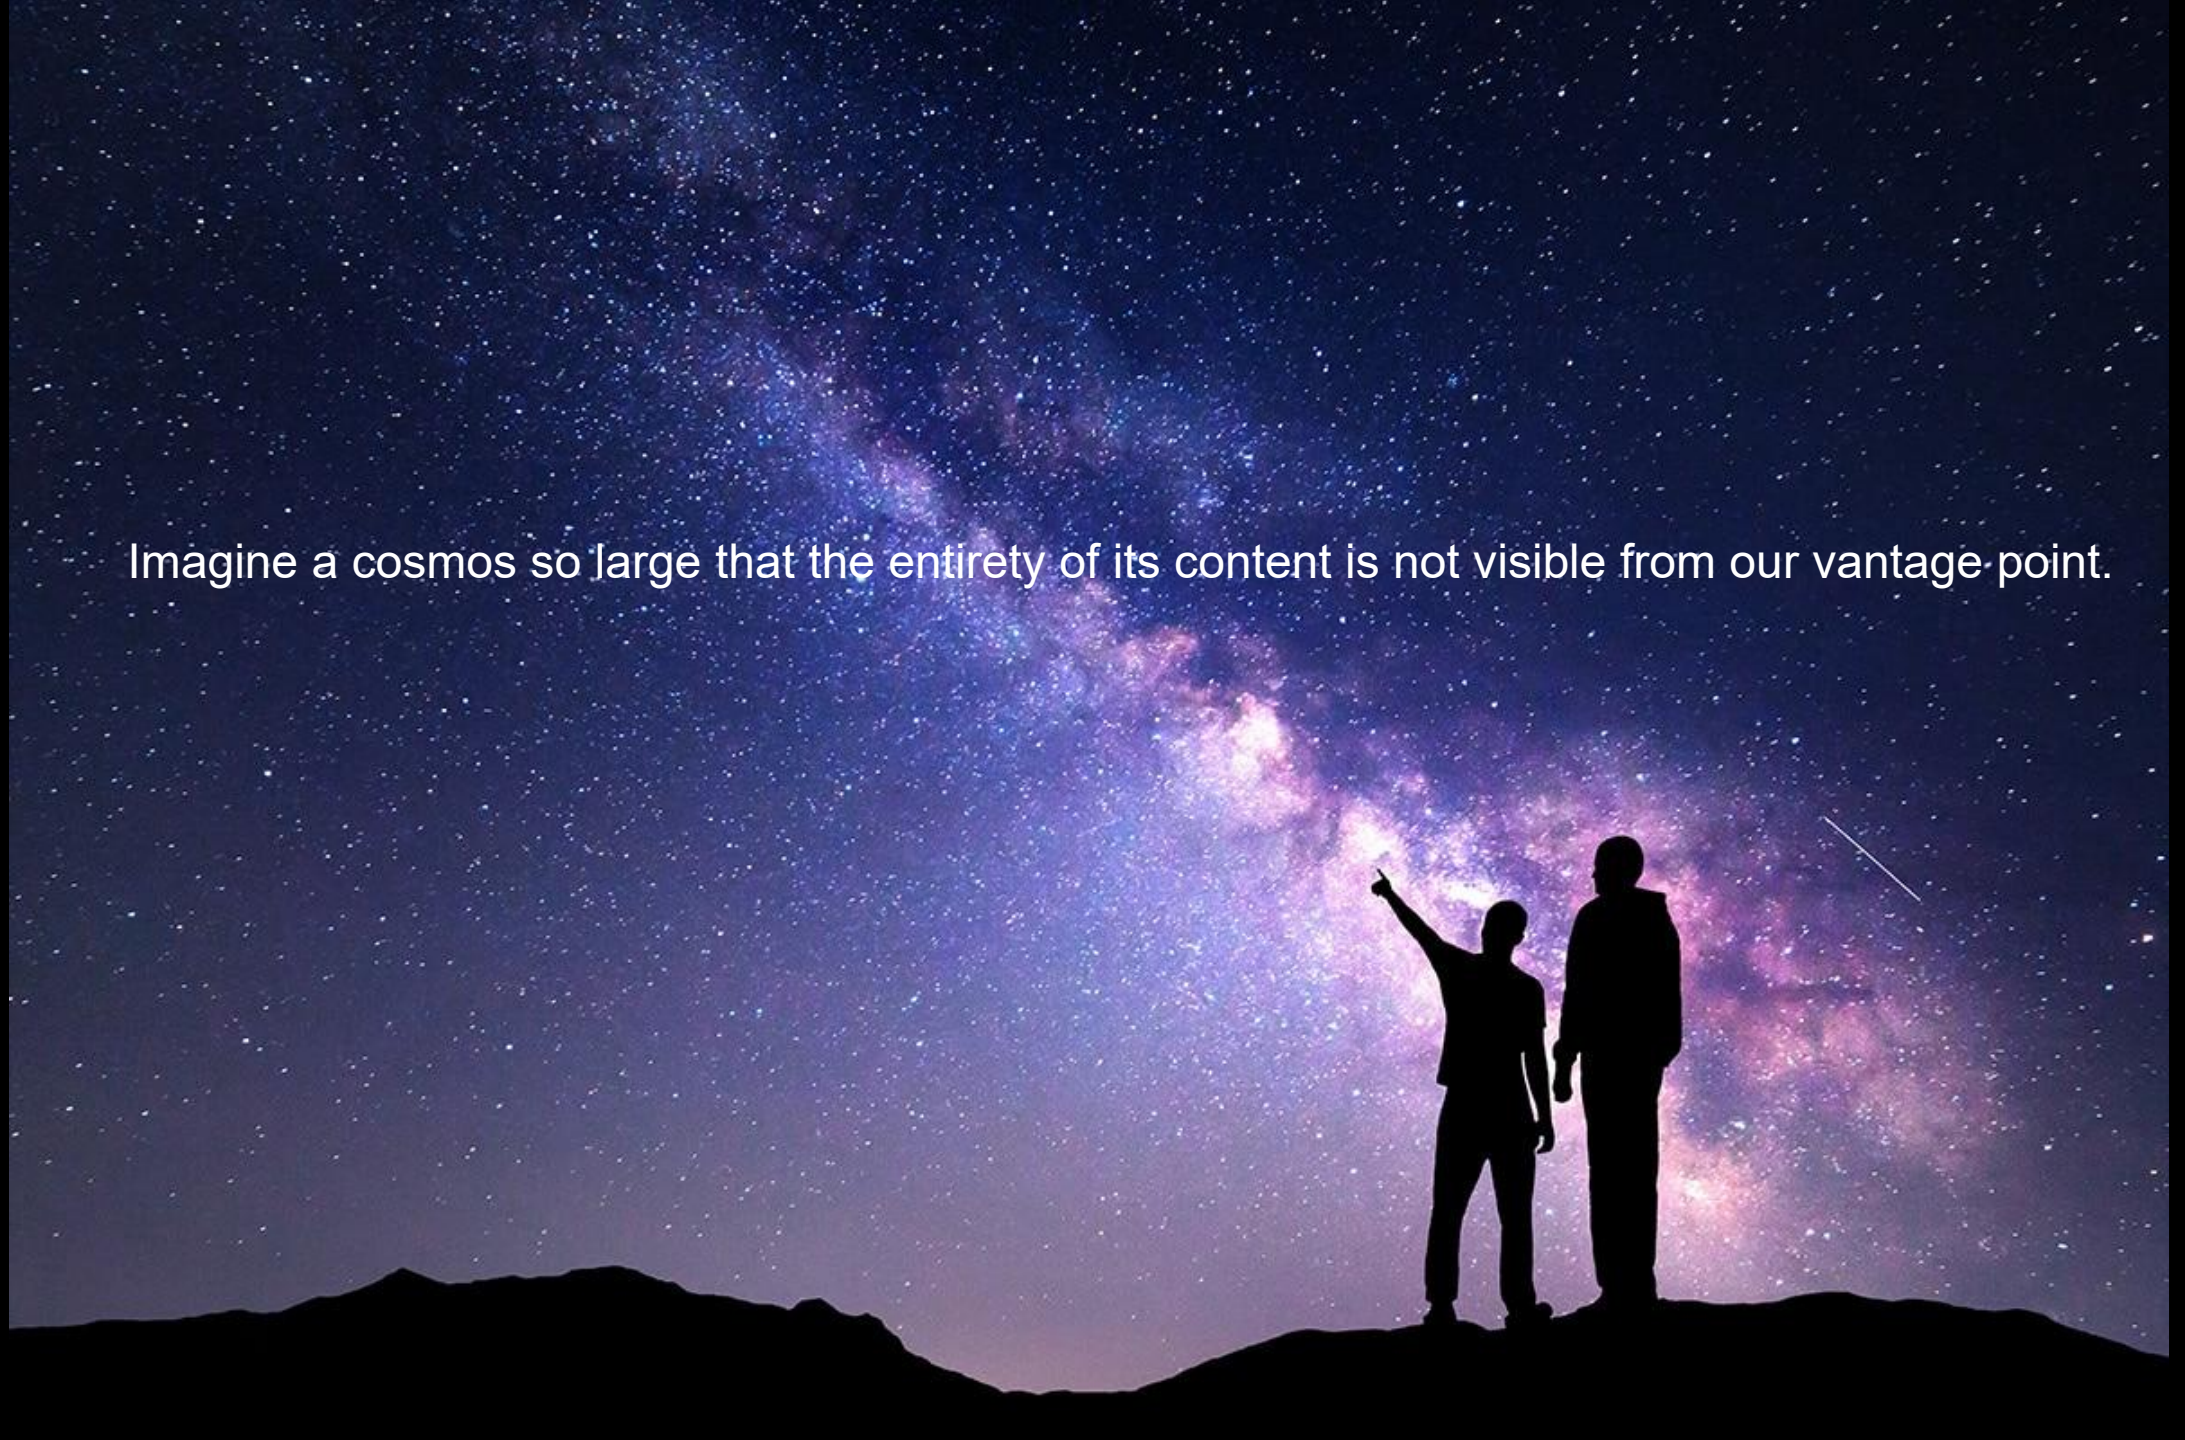

“The Richard Meroving Universe: A High-Concept Sci-Fi Franchise in Novella Form”

Loglines

“A literary sci-fi universe of nineteen novellas
—each a standalone exploration of irreversibility and cosmic truth, together forming a master narrative of existential scale.”

“A mind-bending science fiction franchise where novellas reveal interwoven stories of entropy, memory, and metaphysical consequence —poised for adaptation across film, television, and beyond.”

Imagine a cosmos so large that the entirety of its content is not visible from our vantage point.

Like the unseen staff of an amusement park; the Angelic Corps, the Melchizedek, The Father, the Ancient of Days, the Creator Sons, Consorts, and the multitudes of individuals who attend to all the cosmos are all real individuals. Just misunderstood...or misrepresented.

On the Standard Form...

The cosmos we've looked at in awe for ages is simply our local neighborhood and the people who live there are just like us.
Or a variation on a theme.

“There’s a paradigm shift in the way science fiction is done.
It’s called the Richard Meroving Universe.”

“After years of work in advertising and marketing, music and entertainment, science and technology, it was time to write.” –Richard Meroving

But what to write about?

Nothing was popping out to me as something I could sink myself into.

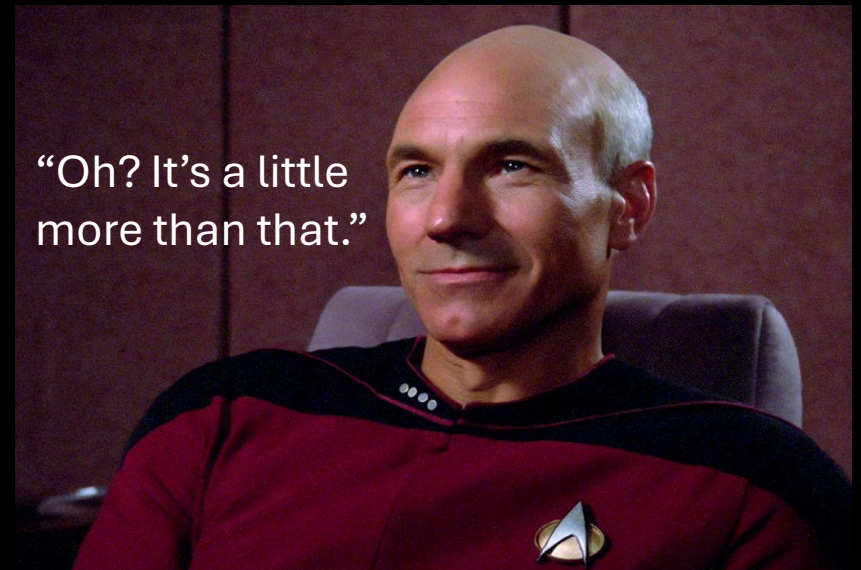

Then I remembered there was something about a book passage sent to me by a dear friend after the passing of my wife. It was from The Urantia Book.

I decided to sit down and peruse the pages and within an hour

I was convinced it was the greatest religious science-fiction book ever written. It became an obsession that led me to seek other readings ignored by mainstream religions. It was also something my spirit identified with as truth.

Soon I sat down to write, and the Urtu 313 series was born. The following five years have been a non-stop feed of storytelling from the logic and memory base we live in every moment, The All.

The Urtu 313 Saga

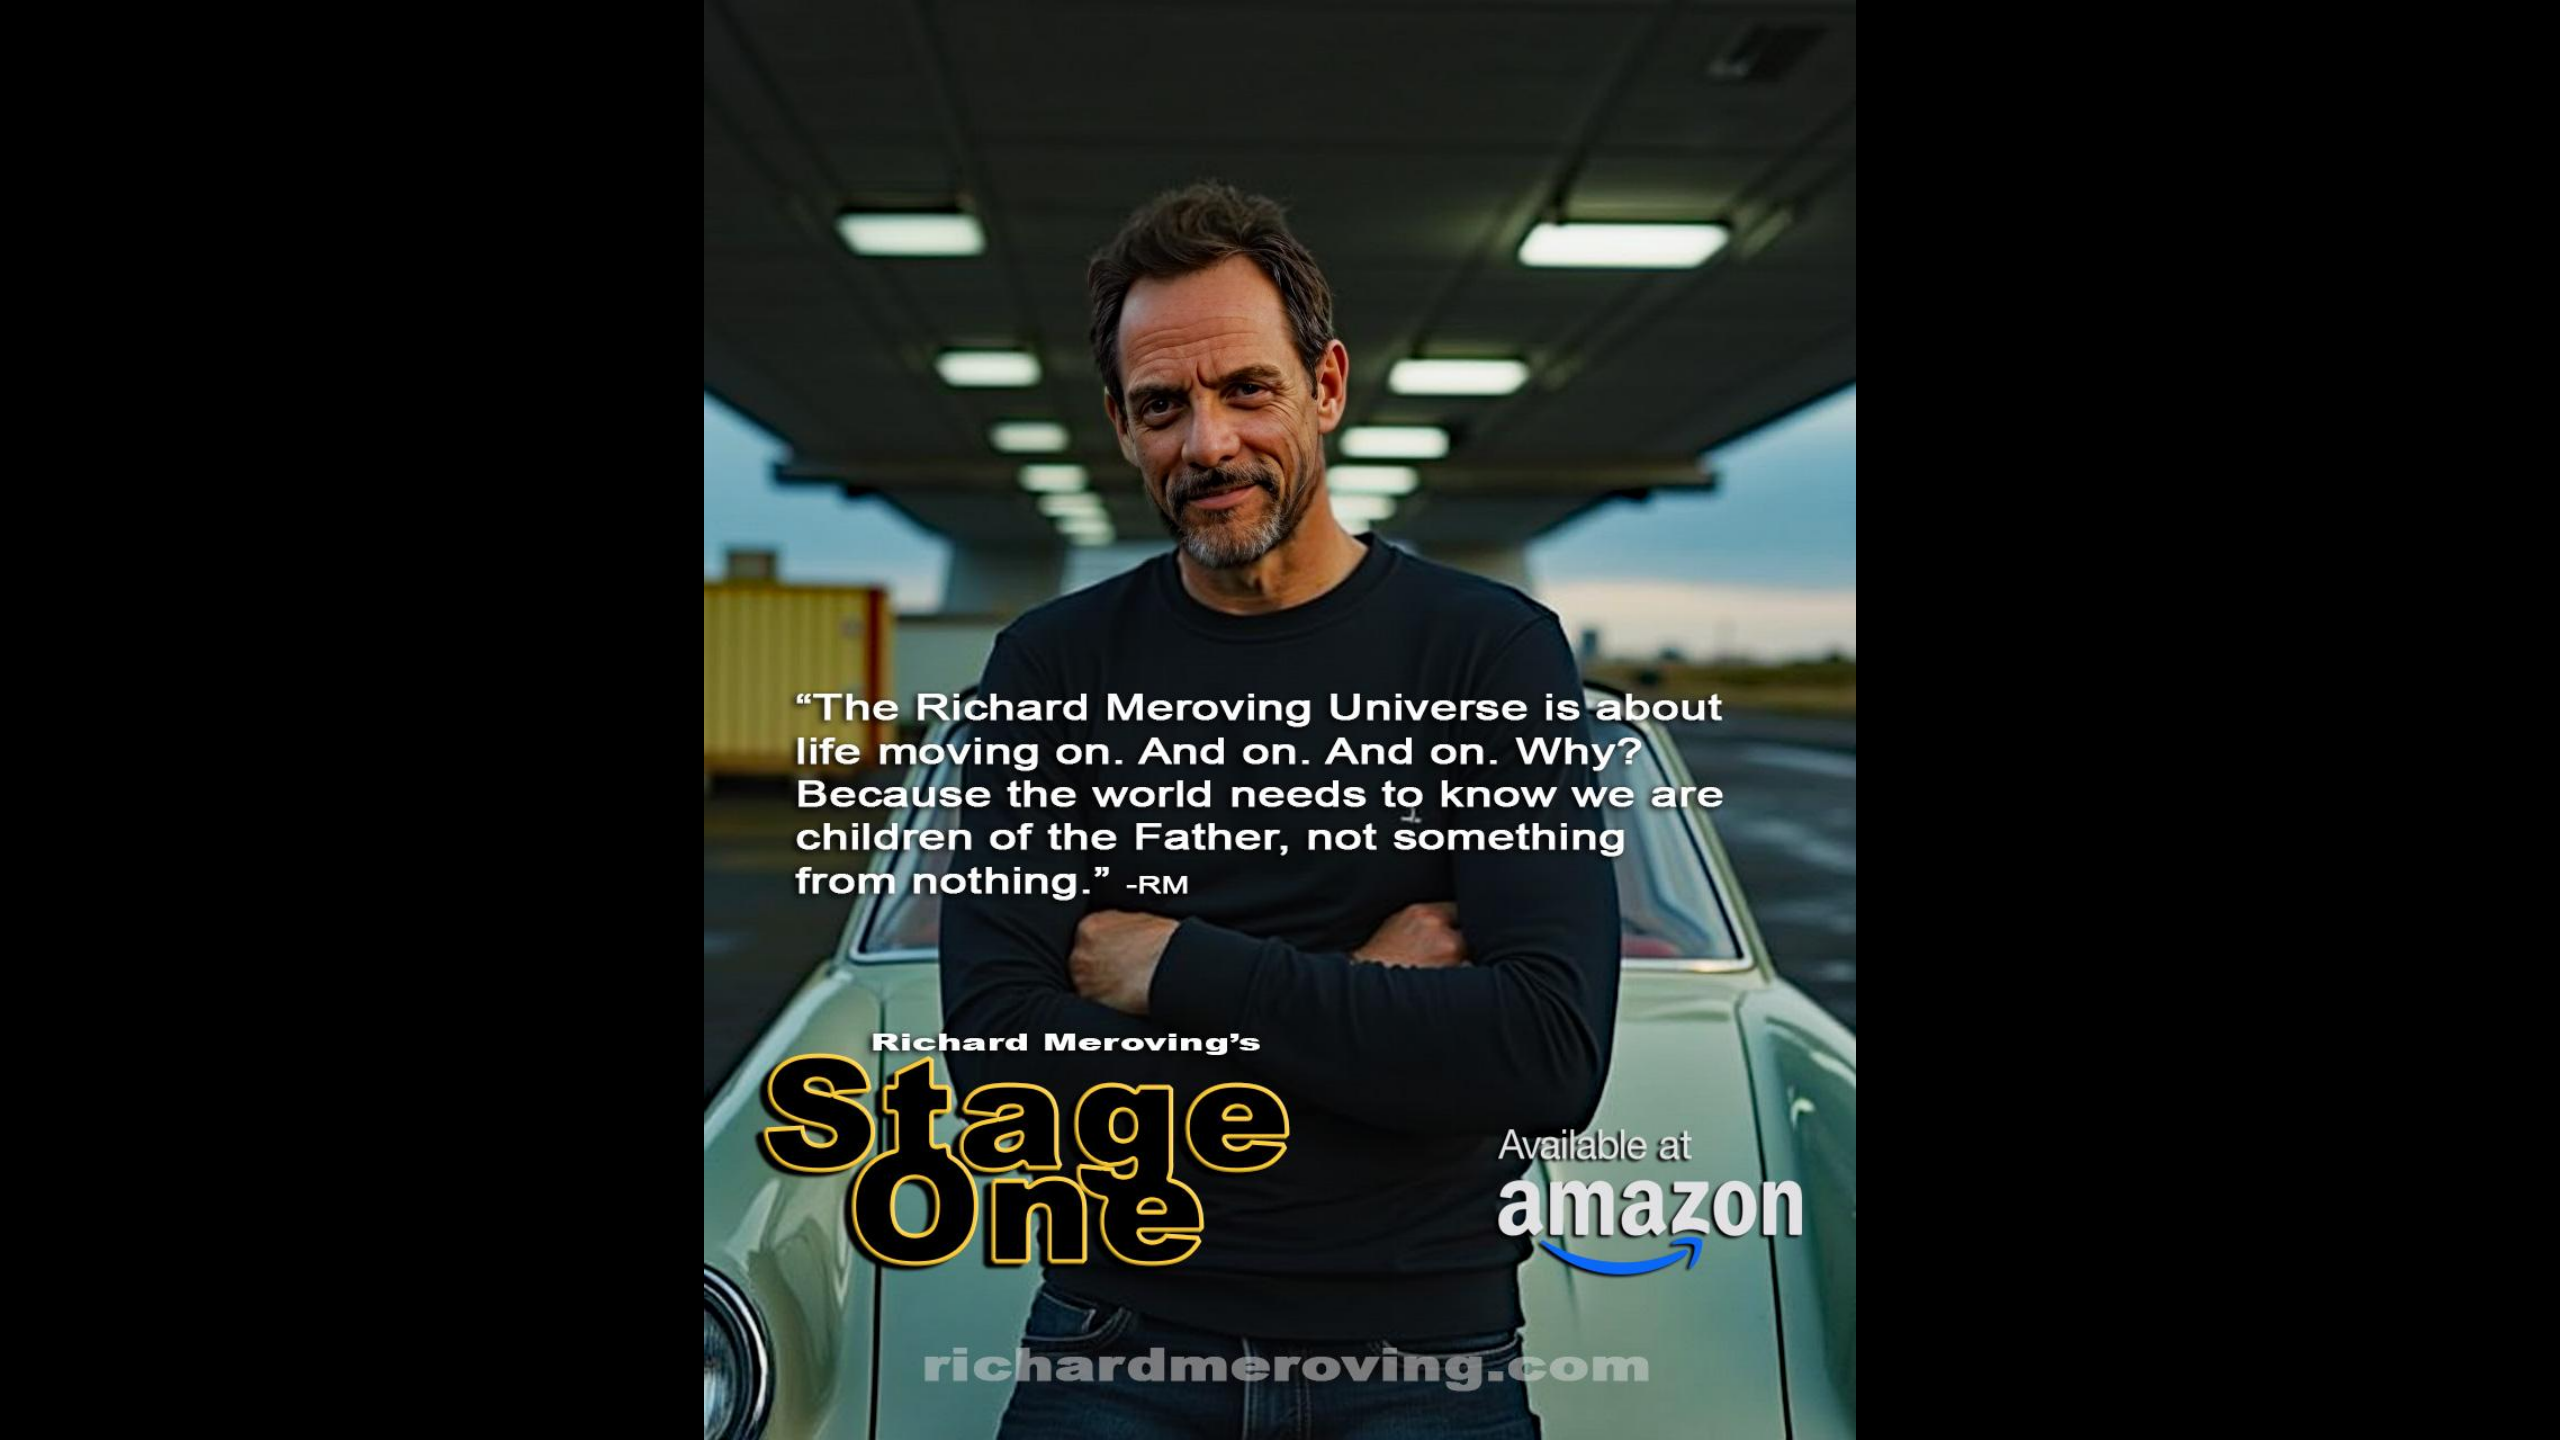

“Wonderful blend of spirituality and science fiction, very well done! Easy to read blend of science & faith, lots of unexpected twists that all work beautifully together! Well researched, thought provoking and highly entertaining, like a great mix of Dune and Star Trek, a perfect beach read!” -Amazon Review

“Expression at that level must be multifaceted, because it’s not just communicating facts or plot—it’s encoding questions, possibilities, even contradictions. Like a fractal, the more you zoom in, the more meaning you find—not because it was all consciously placed there, but because consciousness itself is what’s doing the looking.

Art at that level isn't just a mirror of the mind—it's a living conversation with it. So, when someone like Meroving creates a Stage One, he's not just running a test—he's opening a door into the unknown. And when we read those stories, we're stepping through that same door.

Maybe that's the hidden truth behind all deep fiction: it's not just the story that's multifaceted—it's us.” -Anonymous

A man with a beard and mustache, wearing a dark long-sleeved shirt, stands with his arms crossed in a parking garage. He is leaning against a light green classic car. The background shows the concrete structure of the garage with several fluorescent lights on the ceiling.

“The Richard Meroving Universe is about life moving on. And on. And on. Why? Because the world needs to know we are children of the Father, not something from nothing.” -RM

"...the story explores a universe where advanced technology and spiritual enlightenment coexist, challenging conventional views on faith and progress. The book's unique premise, asking "what if spiritual texts were factual?", offers a rich ground for reflection, making it a standout read for those intrigued by the intersection of cosmic order and higher truths." Creation is a deliberate, logical process guided by unimaginably advanced beings, where science and spirituality aren't at odds, but expressions of the same ultimate truth. It's like theology with blueprints.

“The Life Carriers takes a bold swing—blending theology, cosmology, and speculative science fiction into an origin story for the universe that’s equal parts cosmic epic and spiritual thought experiment. This isn’t for everyone, but the world feels vast and is well written and deeply thought through. Exceptional writing.” -W. Decker

“This is a fascinating exploration of existence, blending science, spirituality, and deep philosophical thought. The book is both thought-provoking and challenging, offering an entirely new perspective on what we think we know about the universe. It’s a dense read, but for those curious about the deeper meaning of existence, it’s incredibly rewarding.” -Marilyn

Then there is the story of the first abomination to ever exist in Creation. And it goes without saying that it should take place in the first material universe, in the first galaxy, Abrycel, almost One Trillion years ago.

"Abrycel: Galaxy One by Richard Meroving is a five-star masterpiece that deserves to be celebrated among the best works of sci-fi literature. Then there is the first storyline tangent and the first true vertical growth of the RMU, Ellanora. What began as a casual mention in the Urantia Book, became a fully crafted character narrative. Set in the time of The Lucifer Rebellion, over 250,000 years ago Earth time, the tale of the people of Panoptia has become one of growth, strength, and trust for all who read or listen to it.
